Gary W. Hill is Professor of Music and Director of Bands at Arizona State University, where he conducts various instrumental ensembles and teaches courses in the graduate conducting program. Hill has held similar positions at the University of Missouri-Kansas City Conservatory, East Texas State University, the University of Colorado, and public school posts in Michigan. As one of the most sought after guest conductors and clinicians in the wind band field, appearances in more than a dozen countries and throughout most of the United States have included performances with myriad high school honor bands, numerous college, university, and professional wind bands and orchestras, more than one hundred workshops on conducting and rehearsal technique, and thousands of clinics for bands and orchestras. Hill’s current research agenda includes: an exploration of biochemical reactions spawned by the musical process and work on a monograph concerning the future of instrumental music education.

Dr. Jason Caslor was appointed Associate Director of Bands and Orchestras at Arizona State University in 2015. In addition to directing various instrumental ensembles, Caslor also mentors graduate conducting students, and teaches undergraduate and graduate conducting courses. In concert, Dr. Caslor has collaborated with, among other ensembles, the Thunder Bay Symphony Orchestra, the National Youth Band of Canada, the South Dakota All State Band, and the Alberta Wind Symphony. As a researcher and teacher, his efforts have lead to engagements in Sweden, Austria, Germany, China, and throughout North America. More information can be found at jasoncaslor.com.
This year, the ASU Wind Bands are presenting timeless masterworks, cutting edge world premieres, and everything in between. Tradition and innovation will meet, and occasionally collide, in what we hope will be an artistically rewarding year for all of us. All concerts are free admission unless otherwise noted.
